In the EU one in three women, around 62 million women, experience physical and/or sexual violence in their lifetime. One in every two women experiences sexual harassment. While a lot has been done at EU level to address violence against women, it is clear there is still a long way to go. This feminist event brings together politicians, civil society and members of the legal profession to ask: are we doing enough to tackle violence against women and do the latest legal developments adequately prevent harm, protect women and girls and help survivors to heal.
